1. Welcome letter

Dear Esteemed Delegates, Chairs, Advisors, and Participants,

We are deeply honoured and thrilled to welcome you to the inaugural edition of LFIGPMUN'27, hosted by the Lycée Français International Georges Pompidou in Dubai.

LFIGPMUN's first edition marks the beginning of a new tradition in our school community: a space where students can engage with international affairs, challenge their perspectives, develop diplomatic skills, and, most importantly, learn how meaningful dialogue can help address global challenges.

LFIGP has long been a diverse, international community. With students representing numerous nationalities, the school thus offers an environment where different cultures, perspectives, and ideas come together. LFIGPMUN builds on this identity, bringing the principles of diplomacy, cooperation, debate, and international understanding into the conference room.

Model United Nations is more than a simulation; it is an opportunity to step into the role of a diplomat and experience the complexity of international decision-making. Throughout the conference, delegates will be challenged to conduct thorough research, speak confidently, negotiate respectfully, collaborate with others, and defend the interests of the countries they represent.

Since this is our inaugural conference, every delegate has the chance to help shape the legacy of LFIGPMUN. The resolutions drafted, debates held, partnerships formed, and ideas exchanged during this conference will establish the groundwork for a tradition we hope will carry on for many years to come.

Whether this is your first MUN conference or you are an experienced delegate, remember that your voice matters. Do not be afraid to speak, question, negotiate, compromise, or propose something new.

On behalf of the entire LFIGPMUN'27 Executive Board, we thank you for joining us for this historic first edition.

We wish you an unforgettable conference.

Warm regards,

The Executive Board
LFIGPMUN'27

2.What is Model United Nations and Why is it Important?

Model United Nations, commonly known as MUN, is an academic simulation of the United Nations in which students assume the roles of representatives of different countries. Delegates participate in committees where they discuss international issues, negotiate with other countries, formulate solutions, and work toward the creation of resolutions.

MUN encourages students to develop several important skills, including:

- Public speaking
- Research
- Critical thinking
- Diplomacy
- Negotiation
- Collaboration
- Leadership

The topics discussed at MUN conferences were handpicked to reflect challenges faced by the international community, including armed conflict, climate change, human rights, economic inequality, public health, international security, technological development, migration, and humanitarian crises.

The complete list of topics can be found on our website: https://lfigpmun.org/

However, MUN is not simply about speaking. A successful delegate must understand that they are representing a country rather than themselves. A delegate may personally disagree with the policy of their assigned country, but their responsibility during committee is to defend and negotiate according to that country's interests, policies, alliances, and diplomatic position.
This is where diplomacy becomes essential.

At LFIGPMUN'27, delegates will have the opportunity to experience the challenges of international diplomacy in a collaborative, competitive environment.
As LFIGPMUN's first edition, we hope to create an environment where delegates can learn from one another, challenge their assumptions, and leave the conference with a deeper understanding of the world around them.

3.LFIGPMUN'27 Terms and Conditions

By registering for LFIGPMUN'27, all delegates, chairs, advisors, and participants agree to comply with the following rules and regulations.

I. Delegates are expected to arrive promptly to all committee sessions and remain present unless permission to leave has been granted.

II. All participants must maintain respectful and professional behaviour toward fellow delegates, chairs, advisors, volunteers, staff, and members of the Executive Board.

III. All delegates, chairs, staff members, and other authorised participants must wear their conference identification badges throughout the conference. Entrance on the second day is only permitted if the delegate, chair or pager has a badge.

IV. Profane, discriminatory, insulting, or otherwise inappropriate language is strictly prohibited. Furthermore, any forms of discrimination, harassment, bullying, or personal attacks based on nationality, ethnicity, religion, or any other personal characteristic will not be tolerated.

V. Any threatening behaviour, intimidation, harassment, or action that may compromise the safety of another participant will not be tolerated. The Executive Board reserves the right to take disciplinary action against any participant who violates this rule.

VI. Authorised LFIGPMUN'27 media personnel may photograph or record participants during the conference. Participants who have concerns regarding photography or filming should contact the Executive Board or conference administration.

VII. LFIGPMUN'27 follows a formal business attire dress code. Delegates are expected to dress appropriately for a diplomatic conference.

VIII. Phones, laptops, tablets, and other electronic devices may be used during committee sessions only for conference-related purposes and in accordance with the instructions of the Chair.

IX. Notes may only contain information relevant to the conference. The Executive Board and Chairs reserve the right to inspect or restrict note passing where necessary.

X. All participants must comply with the rules and regulations of the Lycée Français International Georges Pompidou and the instructions of conference staff.

4. Research

Research is one of the most important parts of MUN preparation. A delegate who understands their country, committee, topic, and potential allies will be significantly better prepared to participate in debate and negotiations.
What to research?

1. Your Committee

- What does the committee do?
- Why was it established?
- When was it established?
- What authority does it have?
- What types of issues does it address?
- What are its limitations?
- What solutions can it realistically propose?
- Which countries are members?
- Which countries are most influential within the committee?

2. Your Topic

- What is the issue and why is it important?
- How did it develop?
- Where does it occur?
- Which countries are most affected?
- What are the major causes and consequences?
- How does the issue differ between regions?
- Which international organisations are involved?
- What actions have already been taken?
- Have previous solutions been successful?
- What weaknesses remain?

Do not limit research to the basic facts. Try to understand the causes, consequences, previous attempts at solving the issue, and potential future solutions.

3. Your Country:

Every delegate should have a strong understanding of their assigned country.

- Geographic location, size, borders, natural resources, strategic importance
- Government type, political system, head of state, head of government, major political institutions, foreign policy, and whether or not it is under a certain Union
- Population size and demographics, major ethnic groups and potential conflicts between them, languages spoken, religions and beliefs
- Economy while considering GDP, major exports and imports, economic partners and any challenges faced
- General history, including previous wars, political issues, and crises relevant to the topic
- Your country's allies and rivals and major treaties and agreements

4. Your Country's Position on the Topic (Stance):

- How does this issue affect your country?
- What does your country believe should be done?
- What has your country already done? (including policies your government has adopted or international agreements your country has signed)
- Which countries share your position?
- Which countries oppose your position?
- What compromises could your country accept?
- What solutions would your country reject?

Remember:

You are not representing yourself. You are representing your country. Your personal opinion should never contradict the official position of your delegation during formal debate.

Research Sources

Delegates should prioritise credible and authoritative sources.
Recommended sources include:

- United Nations agencies
- Government websites
- International organizations
- Academic institutions
- Official treaties and agreements
- Government reports
- Peer-reviewed academic research
- Established international organisations

Examples of reliable domains may include:

- .gov (governmental websites or organisational websites)
- .edu
- .org

Avoid relying on social media posts or unreliable news sources for important claims.

5.Position Papers

What is a Position Paper?
A position paper is a formal document explaining a country's position on the topic being discussed by a committee.

It demonstrates that a delegate understands:

- The issue
- The country's position
- Previous international action
- Potential solutions

Why is it Important?
The position paper is often the first opportunity for the Chairs to evaluate a delegate's research and understanding of their assigned country. It also helps delegates organise their arguments before the conference.

A well-written position paper greatly enhances a delegate's chances for awards like "Best Research" or "Best Delegate". Not submitting a position paper by the deadline may impact award eligibility.

Position Paper Format
Any submitted position paper must follow a specific format; failure to commit to the format will lead to being disqualified from getting an award similar to not writing one or submitting one on time.

- Maximum length: 2 pages, excluding bibliography
- Font: Times New Roman
- Font size: 12
- Line spacing: Single
- Margins: 1 inch

1. Header
The header should contain:
Your school on the left side, for example: Represented by [School name]
The country you will be representing on the right side, for example: Delegation from [Official Country name]

2. Title
The title should state: Position Paper for the [Full Committee Name]

3. Introduction

- The introduction should briefly explain:
- The committee
- Its purpose
- The topic and why it's important
- A brief mention of your country, its relevance to the issue and what your delegation hopes to achieve is recommended

4. Body

a. Background: Provide a concise history and explanation of the issue.
This section should establish:

- What happened
- Why it happened
- What the current situation is
- Why international action is required

This section may take up about 25% of the body.

b. Country Stance: Explain your country's position in detail.

Discuss:

- Your country's interests
- Its policies
- Its previous actions
- Its contributions
- Its concerns
- Its allies
- Its disagreements with other countries

This should be the largest section of the paper. Dedicate approximately 50% of the body to this section.

c. Conclusion and Possible Solutions: Restate your country's position and propose a few realistic solutions. Strong solutions should answer:

- Who will implement them?
- Where will they take place?
- How will they be monitored?
- How will success be measured?
- What happens if implementation fails?

This section may take up about 25% of the body.

References: All sources should be cited appropriately. Unless otherwise specified by the Executive Board, references should follow APA format.

In-text citations are optional; however, including them may increase your score, thereby enhancing your chance of winning the 'Best Research' Award. All resources must be cited in APA format and listed in alphabetical order.

AI Use and Academic Integrity: LFIGPMUN'27 permits limited use of artificial intelligence tools in the preparation of position papers. However, the final submission must primarily reflect the delegate's own research and understanding of their country's position. AI-generated content must not exceed 20% of the submitted position paper.

Plagiarism is strictly prohibited. Any submission containing plagiarised material, regardless of whether the material was obtained from another delegate, a website, publication, AI tool, or any other source, may result in disqualification from awards and further disciplinary action at the discretion of the Executive Board.

Delegation from
The French Republic

Position Paper for the United Nations Human Rights Council

Established on March 15th, 2006 through General Assembly resolution 60/125 (2005), the UNHRC "United Nations Human Rights Council" is an intergovernmental body within the United Nations. This Council replaced the controversial and discredited United Nations Commission on Human Rights, reinforcing a stronger commitment to human rights protection. The UNHRC is composed of 47 Member States elected by the UN General Assembly for three-year terms, with representation distributed according to geographic location (Universal Rights Group). The UNHRC holds regular sessions in Geneva to fulfil its mission of protecting human rights. This is achieved specifically by addressing human rights violations and country situations worldwide, with a focus on making recommendations for improvement (unhrc.org). The current topic before the United Nations Human Rights Council is "Protecting the Rights of Refugees and Asylum Seekers in Host Countries." As the French Republic is among the active members of this committee, it is determined to collaborate with other members to seek resolutions for the pressing issue.

I. Protecting the Rights of Refugees and Asylum Seekers in Host Countries.

As United Nations (UN) Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon stated: "Refugees have a right to asylum — not bias and barbed wire." Despite this, refugees arriving in new countries are often detained by the authorities (amnesty.org). These refugees flee conflict, persecution, or human rights violations in their home country, ultimately crossing an international border in search of safety (unhrc.org). Asylum seekers, driven by equally urgent reasons, flee their country seeking protection. However, they are not yet legally recognised as refugees and await a decision on their asylum claim (amnesty.org). This issue is not new; the period spanning the world wars led to an unprecedented increase in the number of refugees, with an estimated 64 million people displaced in Europe alone. This large-scale displacement led to the establishment of the 1951 Refugee Convention and its 1967 Protocol, which aim to protect refugees and asylum seekers and ensure that host countries fulfil their responsibility of upholding the rights of those seeking refuge within their borders (unhrc.org). While these international guidelines protect those in need, challenges persist. In recent years, ongoing conflicts have driven forced displacement around the globe. Consequently, at the end of 2023, over 117.3 million people were forcibly displaced worldwide (unhcr.org). As a result of this rapid increase, fully upholding the rights of refugees places significant pressure on host countries, which must balance humanitarian concerns with political stability and security.

In September 1952, the Republic of France signed the 1951 Refugee Convention, and it acceded to the 1967 Protocol Relating to the Status of Refugees in February 1971. This commitment demonstrates France's dedication to treating refugees according to internationally recognised standards and illustrates its willingness to share the responsibility for protecting refugees (UNHCR). Furthermore, these values, including the right to asylum are mentioned in the preamble of the French Constitution of 1946 and 1958 (current constitution) which declares: "Any man persecuted in virtue of his actions in favour of liberty may claim the right of asylum upon the territories of the Republic." This illustrates France's historical commitment to offering asylum to foreign refugees. Additionally, as a member of the European Union (EU), the Republic of France is bound by EU legislation including the Dublin Regulation, which is a cornerstone of its approach to Asylum and Refugee protection. The government of France's dedication to these principles is evident as France hosts approximately 700,000 refugees and asylum seekers including Ukrainians who have fled the war, making it the third-largest host country in the European Union (onu.delegfrance.org). The Republic of France has long been dedicated to responding to humanitarian crises and is one of the top ten contributors to UNHCR's global operations. To date, over 100 million USD is the French government's contribution to aiding refugees and internally displaced persons. This commitment reflects the Republic of France's sincere support for vulnerable displaced populations (UNHCR). Moreover, France has signed the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) and the Convention Against Torture (CAT), proving its belief in protecting the rights of displaced people within its borders.

The Republic of France emphasises the importance of creating a global environment that protects human rights while providing the tools for refugees to live and thrive. France highlights the importance of combating discrimination and xenophobia through education and awareness programmes. Instead of excluding these populations, who often fall victim to horrendous exploitation, assault, harassment and racial discrimination. States must empower them to facilitate their integration and allow them to contribute positively to the host countries' economies. In the same context, these populations must be made aware of their rights and obligations. Most importantly, France calls on the UNHRC and the international community to take immediate action against member states who fail to respect the treaties and resolutions they have signed, especially the 1951 Refugee Convention. The implementation of targeted sanctions and other accountability mechanisms is crucial to ensure that all states uphold their commitments to protect those in jeopardy.

4. Guide to Parlimentary Procedure

Parliamentary procedure is the framework that allows a committee to debate in an organised, fair and productive way. It gives delegates a shared set of rules for requesting the floor, raising points, proposing motions and voting. The Chair presides over the committee, recognises speakers and explains which procedural steps are available.
The exact rules and order of procedure may vary according to the committee and the conference. The instructions given by your Chair and the official LFIGPMUN'27 Rules of Procedure take priority over any general explanation in this handbook. If you are unsure, raise a point of parliamentary inquiry at an appropriate time.

1. Roll Call

At the beginning of a session, the Chair takes attendance by calling each delegation. When your country is called, respond clearly using the status requested by the Chair. Some conferences use "present" and "present and voting"; do not assume both options apply at LFIGPMUN'27 unless your Chair confirms this.

2. The Speakers' List

A speakers' list establishes the order in which delegates address the committee. The Chair recognises delegates in turn and informs them of the speaking time. The list may be used for opening statements and, depending on the committee's procedure, for later general debate. Listen carefully for instructions on how to be added to the list.

3. Points

Points are procedural requests, not speeches about the topic. Raise them only when appropriate and address the Chair respectfully.
Point of Personal Privilege: concerns a delegate's ability to participate comfortably, such as being unable to hear a speaker. It should not be used to interrupt simply because you disagree.

- Point of Order: draws the Chair's attention to a possible procedural error or an incorrect fact stated by a delegate. It should refer to a factual error, not challenge another delegate's argument.
- Point of Parliamentary Inquiry: asks the Chair to clarify a rule or explain the procedure currently being followed.
- Point of Personal Privilege: used when the delegate has a personal issue that needs to be addressed (going to the bathroom, adjusting the air conditioning temperature, or if they are unable to hear the speaker...), such points are preferably sent through note form.
- Point of Information (POI): a question directed to a speaker when the Chair has opened the floor to questions or the speaker has yielded time for questions. Wait to be recognised before asking it.

4. Motions

A motion is a formal proposal asking the committee to take a procedural action. A delegate should state the motion clearly and include the details requested by the Chair, such as the topic, total duration or individual speaking time. The Chair will explain whether the motion is in order and how the committee will decide on it.

- Motion to set the agenda:

"Motion to set the agenda to [State the topic]"
Proposes which of the committee's assigned topics should be discussed first. This is generally considered near the beginning of the conference, if the committee has more than one topic.

- Motion to set the general speaker's list:

"Motion to set the general speaker's list to [topic]".
After the agenda has been set, it helps start the debate formally, and opening speeches will be presented.

- Motion for a moderated caucus:

"Motion to move to a moderated caucus on the topic of [State the Topic] for a total speaking time of [state the total time] and an individual speaking time of [1min/1min:30secs]".
Proposes a focused, Chair-led discussion on a specific subtopic. The motion should identify the subject, total duration and speaking time per delegate.

- Motion for an unmoderated caucus:

"Motion to move to an unmoderated caucus on the topic of [State the topic] and a total time of [state the total time]. "
Proposes a period in which delegates may communicate more freely, form groups, negotiate and work on draft resolutions, subject to the Chair's supervision and conference rules.

- Motion to move to voting procedure:

"Motion to move to voting procedure on [resolution/amendment]."
When the delegates wish to move on from the debate and vote on the resolution/amendment that is being discussed. The committee moves to voting procedures and pass/fail the resolution if the chair.

- Motion to adjourn the meeting:

"Motion to adjourn the meeting for [State the purpose]. "
Used when the delegates wish to end the debating session in the last committee session of the conference. The reason for adjourning the meeting is stated and voted upon.

5. Yielding

After giving a speech or presenting a resolution, you must yield any unused time

- To the Chair(s): The chair will automatically take the remaining time, and the debate will continue as you return to your seat. ["The delegate yields the remaining/remainder (of their) time to the chair"]
- To Points of Information (Questions): The delegate can invite a set number of questions or open the floor to questions from all other delegates. ["The delegate yields the remaining/remainder (of their) time to any or all points of information. "]

7. Speeches

Speeches allow delegates to communicate their country's position, explain the reasoning behind a proposal and persuade other delegations. A strong MUN speech is clear, relevant, diplomatic and supported by research. You do not need an exaggerated accent or complicated vocabulary: clear delivery and well-supported ideas are more effective.

1. Opening Speeches

An opening speech is usually a delegate's first formal opportunity to address the committee. It should introduce the country's general position and establish the direction the delegation hopes the debate will take. Follow the speaking time and format announced by the Chair.

A useful structure is:

- Formal address: acknowledge the Chair and fellow delegates in the manner used by your committee.
- Context: briefly identify the issue and explain why it matters to the international community or your country.
- National position: state your country's stance and refer to relevant policies, actions or concerns.
- Proposed direction: mention one or two realistic priorities or areas where your delegation is willing to cooperate.
- Closing: finish with a concise diplomatic statement that invites constructive discussion.

2. Moderated Caucus Speeches

A moderated caucus speech should respond directly to the specific subtopic announced in the motion. Rather than repeating your entire opening speech, make one focused argument, support it with evidence or an example, and explain what action your delegation proposes.

A simple structure is:

- position
- supporting reason or evidence
- proposed action
- invitation to cooperate.

If another delegate has made a relevant point, you may respectfully respond to it while keeping the discussion focused on policy rather than personal criticism.

3. Delivery

- Speak clearly and at a steady pace.
- Maintain appropriate eye contact with the Chair and the committee.
- Use a confident, respectful tone. Avoid shouting, sarcasm or personal remarks.
- Use accurate facts and be ready to explain where your information came from.

4. Diplomatic Language

- LFIGPMUN'27 requires delegates to refer to themselves in the third person during formal debate, using "the delegation of [country]" or "the delegate" rather than informal personal language.

8.Resolutions

A resolution is a formal document that proposes ways to address the issue being discussed by a committee. Drafting one is a central part of MUN because it turns debate and negotiation into a set of written proposals. A good resolution should be realistic, specific, relevant to the committee's mandate and consistent with the position of the delegations supporting it.

1. Before You Draft

Begin by identifying a manageable part of the problem. A resolution does not need to solve every aspect of a complex international issue. Research existing international action, identify gaps and consider what your committee can realistically recommend or do.

- For each proposed action, ask:
- Who is responsible for carrying it out?
- What exactly will be done?
- Where and when will the action take place?
- How will it be funded or resourced?
- How will progress be monitored and evaluated?
- Does the proposal respect the mandate and authority of the committee?

2. Working with a Bloc

- During an unmoderated caucus, delegates with compatible priorities may form a bloc and collaborate on a draft resolution. A bloc should be built around shared policy goals, not simply the number or influence of its members. Listen to other delegations, identify areas of agreement and negotiate compromises without abandoning your country's essential position.

3. Main Parts of a Resolution

- Header: identifies the committee, topic or agenda item, and the names or delegations required by the conference template.
- Preambulatory clauses: provide context, identify relevant facts and refer to previous international efforts. They explain why action is being considered.
- Operative clauses: set out the actions, recommendations or measures proposed by the draft resolution. They should be clear and practical.

An operative clause may include a sub-clause that provides additional explanations, specifications, or lists.
Similarly, a sub-sub clause serves the same purpose for the preceding sub-clause.

Operative clauses should cover many aspects of solving the issue, such as:

- Ways to solve the actual issue.
- Treaties or agreements that need to be signed.
- What is it expected to reach this goal.
- How to ensure the honesty and transparency of nations signing this resolution.
- Consequences a nation within the resolution may face if it disobeys it

Preambulatory phrases

Preambulatory phrases introduce the background or context for the proposed action. They are usually followed by a comma. Common examples include:

Sample Preambulatory Phrases

Affirming	Expecting	Having studied
Alarmed by	Expressing its appreciation	Keeping in mind
Approving	Expressing its satisfaction	Noting with regret
Aware of	Fulfilling	Noting with deep concern
Bearing in mind	Fully alarmed	Noting with satisfaction
Believing	Fully aware	Noting further
Confident	Fully believing	Noting with approval
Contemplating	Further deploring	Observing
Convinced	Further recalling	Reaffirming
Declaring	Guided by	Realizing
Deeply concerned	Having adopted	Recalling
Deeply conscious	Having considered	Recognizing
Deeply convinced	Having considered further	Referring
Deeply disturbed	Having devoted attention	Seeking
Deeply regretting	Having examined	Taking into account
Desiring	Having heard	Taking into consideration
Emphasizing	Having received	Taking note
		Viewing with appreciation
		Welcoming

Operative phrases

Operative phrases introduce the actions or recommendations proposed by the resolution. Choose a verb that accurately reflects the committee's authority and the strength of the proposal. They are commonly followed by a comma.

Sample Operative Phrases

Accepts	Encourages	Further recommends
Affirms	Endorses	Further requests
Approves	Expresses its appreciation	Further resolves
Authorizes	Expresses its hope	Has resolved
Calls	Further invites	Notes
Calls upon	Deplores	Proclaims
Condemns	Designates	Reaffirms
Confirms	Draws the attention	Recommends
Congratulates	Emphasizes	Regrets
Considers	Encourages	Reminds
Declares accordingly	Endorses	Requests
Deplores	Expresses its appreciation	Solemnly affirms
Designates	Expresses its hope	Strongly condemns
Draws the attention	Further invites	Supports
Emphasizes	Further proclaims	Takes note of
	Further reminds	Transmits
		Trusts

Amendments:

Amendments are modifications or improvements a non-author wants to add to a resolution. An amendment can request to remove part of a resolution (striking), add a part, or change or edit a part. The authors have two ways to reply to the amendment:

- Friendly: It is automatically added, and no voting is necessary to entertain it.
- Unfriendly: It is not accepted by the authors and will be debated upon. Chairs will ask for speakers for and against this amendment, and then a voting procedure will take place, which will determine whether it will be entertained or not.

To pass: 50% of the resolution must be authentic and unchanged by amendments. This signifies that if more than 50% of the resolution was edited or even striked, the resolution automatically fails. For United Nations Security Council (UNSC) and General Assembly (GA) committees, this cannot exceed 30%.

Required resolution format:

1. State the forum (the committee)
2. State the agenda (topic)
3. State the authors (number decided by the chairs in each committee./authors are also presenters)
4. State the sponsors (rest of the bloc)
5. State the signatories (countries that want to see the resolution being presented)
6. Write the preambulatory clauses:
   a. The keyword phrases (mentioned above) are in italics and underlined.
   b.They must not be numbered, and they must end in commas.
   c.The number of preambulatory clauses are decided by the chairs.
7. Finally, write the operative clauses:
   a.The keyword phrases (mentioned above) are in bold.
   b.They must be numbered in Roman Numerals and must end in semicolons.
   c.Subclauses must be numbered in lowercase letters and end in commas; if they have sub-subclauses, then they must end with a colon.
   d.Sub-subclauses must be numbered with regular numbers and must also end with commas.
   e.The last clause in the entire resolution paper must end with a full stop.
